

WE NEED YOU!

Join Dubai Carbon.

We're looking for passionate green minded keyboard happy writers to stream their contributions straight into our publications. Whether you have previous writing or journalism experience or not, we want to hear from you. With your help, we want to keep sustainability exciting by covering the region's top stories. Whether it's a project you've heard about or are personally working on. Whether its an environmental issue which you think needs more attention. Whether it's good work in the region which deserves much more recognition, we want you to cover, report and write.

Sustainable Bloggers' Community

Dubai Carbon is on the look out for Sustainable Bloggers for our industry leading publications. If you walk the green walk and talk the green talk, it's time to pen that passion on recycled paper (and online too!) and become part of sustainable bloggers' community for The Sustainabilist.

You may be a stay-at-home mum, or an engineer or a scientist or a corporate executive with no professional sustainability experience. We want to hear from you all. We are looking to build an empowered community of Sustainable Bloggers to be the voices of the region. With your contributions, we want to blend the facts and figures with the opinions and thought leadership of the entire green community.

The role of a Sustainable Storyteller is freelance and autonomous. We don't want you to be sat in the office for 8 hours a day churning out average articles for the sake of content. We wish to create a community of bloggers which we would invite to events or to interview VIP's or simply to research topics. It will be a 'pay as you go' type engagement where rather than a stipend, we have a cost-recovery fee for all contributors based on approved content word count.
